The method, denoted by the acronym NEW (Natural Energy from Waste) operates through the following process phases: a) aerobic digestion of the putrescible biological part to produce stabilised waste which is easy to handle, b) separation of a fraction rich in materials with a high heat value, c) storage of the residue, rich in biodegradable and inert substances, compacted into appropriate geometrical shapes in bioreactors which can be activated and sealed, d) activation of the bioreactors with water and their service in the time during anaerobic digestion to supply biogas to be used for the production of energy, e) bio-stabilisation and dehydration of the residual material of the anaerobic treatment with air, f) possible recovery of the materials produced in this way. In this way the energy contained in the waste, is extracted at the most refined level in the form of plastic, plastic/paper and rethane for energy uses with maximum yield and reduced production of ash, and the end material leaving the bioreactors is fully exhausted of its energy content and inertised.

(54): IMMUNOMODULATOR FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF HUMAN IMMUNODEFICIENCY VIRUS (HIV) DISEASE/INFECTION. (51) Int.Cl.A: 6 1K 35//74, 6 1P 31//18, 37//02 (57): Human Immunodeficiency virus causes depletion of CD4 cells. The depletion of CD4 cells results in decrease in immunity of an infected individual. Due to decrease immunity various opportunistic infections occur. These infections are cause for morbidity and mortality in HIV infected individuals. The treatment of HIV includes antiretroviral drugs. These drugs have their own side effects and immune reconstitution achieved is delayed and slow. Various attempts have been made to improve CD4 count, use of IL-2 is one of them. It is associated with systemic side effects during the period of its administration. The present invention provides immunomodulator based on Mycobacterium w. Its use is associated with symptomatic improvement as well as improvement in immunity as evidenced by improved CD4 count in HIV infected individuals.

(51) Int.Cl.E: 0 1C 11//04

(57): The traditional paving systems employed until now, consider the width of pavement slabs equal to a lane width and the long dimension equal to the lane width or 6 meters long. These dimensions make that the vehicles loads, and especially loaded truck, apply the loads at both edges simultaneously, inducing tensile stresses on the slabs surfaces when they are warped. The current invention proposes to build a concrete slab where the maximum width value of slab D_x is being given by the lower measure between the distance D_1 of the front wheels of a model loading truck or by de mean, and the distance D_2 of a rear running gear of the same truck or the mean; the maximum slab length L is given by the distance between the truck axles or the mean; and the thickness E is given by the concrete resistance value, considering traffic loads, the kind and quality of the base, and the ground type. The current invention comprises the design methodology of this concrete slab, which allows that always only one wheel or only one running gear of the truck, used as model truck or mean, touch and moves over the slab

 (54) Title: TOP SPEED LIMITER MECHANICAL SPEED RECOGNITION SYSTEM.
 (57) The nvention is principally a control device and specifically relates to the sensing and capturing of the accurate control speed desired, as is required of any vehicle fitted with a speed limiter (governor) which is its principal use. The principle can also be largely and similarly be used as a control device for other quantifiable parameters such as temperature control, pressure control etc.

A mechanical speed controlling and detection mechanism comprising of:

A rigid insulated copper earth-wire (see b) on FIG. 1 on the drawings) that leads from the mounted vehicle speed limiter control module (see a) on FIG.1 on the drawings) and permanently fixed to the rear of the face (see c) on the drawings of the speedometer dial.

A fine copper metal fibre permanently attached on the speedometer clock dial rear (see c) on FIG. 1 on the drawings) that connects both the rigid insulated copper wire mentioned in claim a) above and the movable speedometer clock needle axle at the rear of the clock dial (see c) on FIG. 1 on the drawings).

A fine copper metal wire permanently attached at a separate position on the speedometer clock dial at the rear of the face on one end and permanently earthed at the other end (see d) on FIG. 1 on the drawings).

The above invention provides a previously unused technical solution to a technical problem achieved by the use of novelty character and having extensive industrial use.
