(57) Sulfation is a obscurity caused when crystallized Lead sulphate (pbSO4) due to battery discharge in lead-acid batteries can no longer be reversed to Lead (pb) or Lead oxide (pbO2) and sulphuric acid (H2SO4). Sulfation affects the charging cycle, resulting in longer charging times, less efficient and incomplete charging, and higher battery temperatures. In many cases sulfation can cause premature death of the battery. The invention of a chemical treatment process to remove/cleanse crystallized sulfation on Lead-acid batteries is a two stage procedure. It involves the use aqueous solution of Sodium Hydroxide which is prepared by dissolving the active ingredient on site within minutes prior to its use since it's a self warming solution; then the use of aqueous solution of sodium bicarbonate to complete the cleansing process. The present invention relates to the field of lead-acid battery life extension. It is to be used for maintenance, repair/resuscitating and salvaging of sulfated lead acid batteries.

(57) Petroleum based products form a high proportion of energy used in transportation, domestic cooking and lighting. Biodiesel is a renewable diesel fuel substitute that can be made by chemically combining any natural oil or fat with an alcohol such as methanol or ethanol through transesterification, bringing the physio-chemical properties of the oils closer to those of the petro-diesel. Feedstock comprises 65-78% of the overall costs of biodiesel production hence biodiesel processors have strong incentives to produce or purchase feedstock at the lowest possible cost. Second generation biofuels are thus gaining interest because of their non-competence with food materials. Jatropha curcas seeds have been rated as one of the best candidate for biodiesel production due to its adaptability to semi-arid lands and its non-edible. However, water, fertilizer and pest control are required for the plant to produce abundant seeds. It also still requires large plantation land areas for maximum oil yields, in addition to good pressing equipment for oil extraction. Waste vegetable oils present an inexpensive raw material for biodiesel production.

(57) The invention relates to a tidal wave powered device and a method thereof for producing potential energy from the movement of tidal waves in a water mass, the device comprising a cylinder anchored to the bed of the water mass with a piston located in the cylinder to define a pumping chamber therein. A storage tank is located at an elevated height for storage of water delivered from the cylinder pumping chamber. A docking unit anchored to the bed of the water mass is connected to a floater such that when the floater attains an optimal height the docking unit is locked in to hold the floater in an elevated position. The docking unit is opened to release the floater from the elevated position so that the weight of the floater pushes the piston downwards to deliver water from the pumping chamber of the cylinder into the storage tank.
