(51) Int.Cl.8: H 04W 52/30, 52/34, 52/36, 52/54

(57): Power headroom reports may be transmitted from a wireless terminal to a base station wherein a primary component carrier and at least one secondary component carrier are provided for uplink transmissions from the wireless terminal to the base station and wherein a respective component carrier index is assigned to each of the at least one secondary component carriers provided for the wireless terminal. Respective power headroom reports may be generated for the primary component carrier and for each of the at least one secondary component carriers, and a MAC control element may be generated including the power headroom reports for the primary and secondary component carriers. More particularly, the power headroom reports for each of the at least one secondary component carriers may be arranged in order of the component carrier indices for the respective secondary component carriers. The MAC control element including the power headroom reports for the primary and secondary component carriers may be transmitted from the wireless terminal to the base station over one of the component carriers. Related wireless terminals, and base stations are also discussed.

(51) Int.Cl.8: H 04L 1/00, 5/00, H 04W 48/16

(57): According to some embodiments, a method in user equipment (920) is provided. According to the method, the user equipment receives, over a first cell (970) configured on a carrier frequency, at least one parameter associated with a second cell (980) configured on a carrier frequency. The at least one parameter comprises a cell identity. The user equipment (920) then derives (1050) at least one physical layer characteristic for the second cell (980) based on the received at least one parameter. Thereby, the user equipment (920) is able to receive transmissions over the second cell (980), even if it could not initially detect the presence of the cell.

(51) Int.Cl.8: A 61K 47/48, A 61P 35/00

(57): The present invention provides immunoconjugates composed of antibodies, e.g., monoclonal antibodies, or antibody fragments that bind to mesothelin, that are conjugated to cytotoxic agents, e.g., maytansine, or derivatives thereof, and/or co-administered or formulated with one or more additional anti-cancer agents. The immunoconjugates of the invention can be used in the methods of the invention to treat and/or diagnose and/or monitor cancers, e.g. solid tumors. The immunoconjugates comprise antibodies and functional fragments containing such antigen-binding regions that are specific for the membrane-anchored, 40 kDa mesothelin polypeptide, which is overexpressed in several tumors, such as pancreatic and ovarian tumors, mesothelioma and lung cancer cells.

(54) GLASS PANEL SOLAR POWERED TUNNEL DRYER

(57) The innovative factors considered included; Optimized glass-collector plate clearance, removal of air from the clearance created, size of the heat collector, insulation of the whole drier, solar power supply, air movement using car radiator fans, optimization of heat collection using stainless steel wool, enhancement of natural convection and provision of simple heat collector panel. The glass-collector clearance was optimized using a genetic algorithm giving a value of 25mm. This ensured minimal air in the clearance, increased radiation energy production and absorption. A 4mm thick glass was used as top cover whereas the collector plate had a thickness of 5mm. The plate was painted black using blackboard paint to enhance the heat collection process. To minimize heat loss by convection in the glass-plate clearance, the clearance was vacuumed to 0.25 atmospheres. The heat collector panel is developed as a single unit measuring 1245.5mm by 1245.5mm. The heat collector chamber was optimized to give a depth of 100mm with 0.1mm aluminium sheet on an insulated bottom and sides. The bottom had 50mm of polystyrene sandwiched between 2mm plywood for insulation. Heat transmission from the plate to the drying air was optimized using stainless steel wool. The wool provided contact with the steel plate and increased the surface area and contact time with the drying air. Air flow was enhanced by two DC fans located at the inlet and outlet operated by a 100W solar panel. Eight heat collectors were found to sustain a temperature of 50 degrees centigrade over a period of eight hours under normal weather conditions.

(54) DOOR FRAME FOR THIN WALLS

(57) A jamb assembly (1) is used to form a door frame system for installation within a relatively thin wall (7) having an opening for a door. The jamb assembly (1) comprises a first surface finished elongated member (2) having a substantial L-shape and running along one side of the wall (7). A groove (6) is formed between two panels (5, 9) that are held together by glue. A suitable fastening means (16) such as a screw is used to attach the sub-assembly comprising of panels (5,9) to the wall once the sub-assembly is placed against the edge of the wall forming the door opening to run along the entire edge. The jamb assembly has a second elongated member (2') also having an L-shape and inverted relative to the first one so that it may be glued to the edge (10) formed by aligning the surface of the wall (7) to the edges of the two panels (5, 9) so that the combination fits together to form a the jamb assembly with an adjustable width to accommodate wall thickness differences. The first (2) and second (2') elongated members are then glued in place so that their visible exterior surfaces have been workshop finished; and are not ruptured by using other fastening means such as screws

(57) The embodiments herein provide an authentication and tracking and retail analytics system. The system comprises of code generation module, a database server, an authentication module and a communication channel. A code generation module generates unique authentication code. This unique authentication code is printed/labeled on the product. Label/tag that is marked or contains a hidden code is placed on a product requiring verification. In order to verify the product, the consumer or retailer defaces or scratches a portion of the label/tag and reveals its hidden code. Consumer or retailer sends the product authentication code to specified number mentioned via any communication device capable of sending and receiving SMS/MMS/picture/graphics. The verification software decrypts the encrypted authenticated code and compares decrypted code with the original data assigned for the code to determine an authenticity of the product and sends reply message to the consumer or retailer.
