It's intended to allow people who are deafblind to send and receive text messages as well as interact with other applications using their knowledge of the braille. The wearable has 6 coin vibrators embedded onto it. The microcontroller controls the vibration of these coin vibrators, directly reflecting braille characters. The mobile application is the component that will be used to send and receive texts, and it allows the user to enter characters in form of braille and these will then be aggregated and sent to the recipient. It also has an interface that will allow the deaf-blind user to peruse through received messages, whose individual characters will be transcoded to braille and the microcontroller will trigger vibration of coin vibrators on the wearable device to vibrate as per the braille characters.
