(57) The Power Steering Pump is the hydraulic system that allows the driver to turn the steering wheel without taking much effort. When you turn your steering wheel it turns the steering column that leads down to the steering rack. The rack moves by turning the pinion that is connected to the steering column. Turning the wheels without using the steering pump would be difficult at low, parking-lot speeds. The pump is what drives the power steering. Inside the pump there are retractable rotary vanes that spin in an oval chamber. This takes the power steering fluid from the reservoir and pressurizes it. The fluid travels down a high pressure rated hose and into the steering rack, which is connected to the wheels to help you turn the wheels left or right. The steering rack then applies the pressurized fluid against a hydraulic piston that aids in the movement of the steering rack in either direction. A belt connected to your engine runs the pump. This means that the amount of flow of pressurized fluid depends on the speed that the engine is running. There is a pressure relief valve in the pump that makes sure the pressure does not become too high while driving at high engine speeds.

(57) A process, method and system for advanced desalination with mineral recovery and pelletization of organic matter. Saline water is pre-treated for bulk removal of organic and inorganic material and the resultant solids and settled sludge used for pelletization of agriculturally viable soil. Further stages of advanced desalination of settled water optimize divalent ion rejection and reduces scale formation through ultrafiltration and employ nanofiltration to selectively reject divalent ions, producing brine rich in constituents that facilitate the recovery of gypsum, calcium chloride and carbon dioxide gas. Reverse osmosis is employed to remove residual dissolved solids from resulting feedwater by rejecting salts and producing a second brine stream rich in constituents that facilitate the recovery of sodium chloride, potassium chloride bromine and boric acid. The entire system also produces clean, demineralized, potable water.

When one piston is at the top of its piston cylinder, the other piston of the same pair is at the bottom of its piston cylinder characterized in that due to weight difference acting on the two piston heads the piston at the top of its piston cylinder is pushed downwards while the piston at the bottom of its piston cylinder is pushed upwards. The invention further discloses a crankshaft assembly that is designed to convert the reciprocating motion of the piston to useful circular motion that is capable of connecting to a generator to generate unlimited amounts of electricity. Also disclosed are three related methods of mounting an engine propelled by weights difference acting on its piston heads.

(51) Int.Cl.2016.01: B 01D 61/44, C 07H 3/04, A 23L 5/20

(57) Abstract: A process, method and system for advanced desalination with mineral recovery and pelletization of organic matter. Saline water is pre-treated for bulk removal of organic and inorganic material and the resultant solids and settled sludge used for pelletization of agriculturally viable soil. Further stages of advanced desalination of settled water optimize divalent ion rejection and reduces scale formation through ultrafiltration and employ nanofiltration to selectively reject divalent ions, producing brine rich in constituents that facilitate the recovery of gypsum, calcium chloride and carbon dioxide gas. Reverse osmosis is employed to remove residual dissolved solids from resulting feedwater by rejecting salts and producing a second brine stream rich in constituents that facilitate the recovery of sodium chloride, potassium chloride bromine and boric acid. The entire system also produces clean, demineralized, potable water.

(54) Prepaid Electricity Meter with Automated GSM (Global System for Mobile Communications) Token Recharge using Mobile Money Payment Platform

(57) This invention relates to the field of electronics and related industries where automated recharge using a mobile phone without entering the code manually. It enables phone notification when a specified threshold 80% of units are consumed, wherein, after this threshold, periodic notifications will be given, providing the estimated time the units will be totally finished. It enables generation of consumption data for each consumer, showing how the power units are consumed on a daily basis and trends on daily power consumption. The invention enables the data to be used to generate 'units loans' and develop a credit score algorithm based on a customer's power consumption and unit buying patterns.

(73) Applicant(s): OYUGI JACK OMONDI, P.O.BOX 34313-00100, NAIROBI, Kenya

(74) Agent: FRED OTSWONG'O & INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ASSOCIATES,

(57) An animal cake meal of high protein concentrate produced from processing Eichhornia crassipes water hyacinth) is disclosed. In one process embodiment, water hyacinth plant is harvested from lakes or rivers, cleaned and steam boiled, wherein the pre-steamed water hyacinth is allowed to cool, dried, crushed and value added. The dried water hyacinth is then passed through Solid State Fermentation (SSF) stage, wherein the single cell fermenting organisms comprising filamentous fungi 'Lentinus sajor-caju' are inoculated to carry out the fermentation process and 'Thiobacillus spp' carry out bioleaching of heavy metals like iron in about 45 days. The end product hyacinth biocatalyst is purified, dried, milled and packaged as animal feed product called hyacinth cake and formulated into different animal feeds like dairy meal, poultry mash, fish pellets, pig mash and mineral salt leak. The resultant products are fed to animals directly or used in formulating animal feeds and bio-fertilizers.

(54) ELECTRICITY CURRENT PRODUCTION/GENERATION

(57) It is known that electricity production /generation in an ordinary automobile alternator is by rotation of electromagnets inside a set of coils. During this rotation the battery powered electromagnets subject the coil to changing electromagnetic flux hence inducing an electric current on the coil. My invention relates to producing an electric from stationary electromagnets and stationary coil. A stationary coil or set of coils is subjected to alternating electromagnetic influences from a stationary electromagnet or subjecting the coil to a single electromagnetic interruption, hence inducing an electric current on the coil. The electromagnets are powered by a electric power source via switching device. The electric current so produced will be used to power electronic and electrical appliances. The principle objective of my invention is to produce electricity efficiently, pollution free and that is reliable.
