Whereas other wheels consist of an axel, metal rim and rubber tyre, this invention discloses continuous rubber and the axel with a rim. The invention eliminates use of metal rim, and hence solve the problem of the tyre wearing off and separating from the rim. This improved wheel is moulded into one single piece, thus having no separation from the rim or hub, and effectively eliminating or minimizing chances of breakages thus making the wheel durable.

(57)

The invention involves to an improvement of the manual use of an electric bell to an automatic electric bell. Most institutions have been using a manual electric bell, which consist of electromagnet, Conducting coils and gong and hammer to run their programs of time keeping manually. Due to this challenge an automatic time keeping system was discovered in India. The system comprises of a microcontroller and LED light, was designed and served efficiently. Still learners found it difficult to understand on how it operates, it is complicated but finally I have come up with a very simple and cheap system to serve the same purpose of auto time management. My system is made up of the manual electric bell that I have upgraded and an auto switch which runs the bell automatically.

(57) The present invention discloses a cell phone-based voting system using Interactive Voice Response System (IVRS) and unstructured supplementary service data (USSD). In this invention, a smart voting scheme using mobile technology is presented. The system enables a voter to register using a national identity (ID) and phone numbers as unique identifiers, which are matched in the database with a system generated pin assigned to each registered voter. In a method of voting, the system prompts a welcome message to the user to enter voting number and passcode to retrieve voter information. If authentication of information is valid, candidates list is generated to allow the voter cast his vote in favour of his/her preferred candidate. This is followed by increment for respective candidate upon receipt of information from candidates. If authentication is invalid, the system is shut down.

(57) The invention is useful in preventing loss of laptops. Manufacturers are issued with codes to brand the laptops with. After branding them the unique code, all can recognize this code anywhere where the accompanying software is used to scan the product. The scan logs are maintained and checked against user details to confirm that a user owns the device. A mismatch in identity can be detected and the laptop returned to the owner. The system can also verify whether the laptop is stolen during purchase. Manufacturers can also track down the usage of their brands and the areas they need to reach out to and market.
