Geographically, the topography within the hydro power stations makes the area habitable for numerous animals due to the vast forests that engulf the stations. Currently the measures used to scare away the monkeys, is the engagement of Kenya Wildlife Service Personnel who once in a while scare away the monkeys with rubber bullets. After a while they are back again and the population has continued to increase over time. Monkeys are quite destructive causing loss of revenue -to industries and farmers thus resorting to keeping of dogs to scare them away so as to protect their equipment (e.g. transformers) and crops. The sound of dogs barking is enough to scare away the monkeys. Dogs also have their limitations and demands and so recommendation is for a robot called a Dog-Watch. This is a fabricated mechanical dog with sensors that cover a radius of 25meters apart at 180degrees. The sensors are infrared and motion detectors and anything moving and coming within that radius, is picked up and signals are sent to the relays that set off the other systems. The dog can move its jaws up and down, and can stand from a sitting position and bark with the help of an installed audio player inside it. The audios which are recorded are of a dog barking and a monkey in distress which is very scary for monkeys and will make them take off. A signal is also sent to the control room to alert the personnel of the intruder.

(54) Title: CHIA SUPPLEMENTED YOGHURT FOOD

(57) A method for use in making chia supplemented yoghurt, comprising the steps of hydrating chia seeds to obtain a hydrated chia seed component that is act as a thickener, stabilizer and emulsifier in the yoghurt; and heating whole milk to 40°C and adding whole chia seeds, then pasteurize at 95°C for 20 minutes using reduced fermentation time (2 hours) without compromise of product quality. This uses different varieties of chia seeds as white, black and brown and combinations thereof, to improve the nutritional and functional properties of yoghurt. A mild starter culture is used for fermentation of the yogurt comprising Lacto Dacil/us bulgaricus and Streptococcus thermophil/us that do not cause post acidification. This follows a step of enhancing the chia supplemented yogurt composition with an additive selected from the group consisting of either strawberry or vanilla flavoring and coloring to suit local consumers preferences. The chia supplemented yoghurt is packed with addition of an antioxidant (BHT/BHA) and hermetically sealed at room temperature in bottles/cups before rapid cooling of the yogurt composition. This gives a product of chia supplemented yogurt composition comprises whole milk, chia seeds, antioxidant (BHT /BHA) with or without sweetener, and with or without other flavorings.
