The content of an organic solvent that can dissolve the acrylic polymer in the acrylic fiber is 0.1 to 3wt%. The acrylic fiber for artificial hair can be produced by: extruding a spinning solution containing the acrylic polymer through a spinning nozzle to form a yarn; drawing the yarn to prepare a primary drawn yarn and washing it with water; and impregnating the water-washed primary drawn yarn with an organic solvent that can dissolve the acrylic polymer. Thus, the present invention provides an acrylic fiber for artificial hair having favorable curl setting properties with hot water, a method for producing the same, and a hair ornament product including the same.

(51) H 04L 29/06, G 06F 21/30, G 06F 21/40

(57) A zero trust transaction authentication architecture and tools are disclosed. The architecture and tools are characterized by a bank server, one or more third-party servers initiating transactions received from third-party terminals, on account number objects in a core banking system configured on the bank server. The third tool, a bank server, receives the objects of the transaction from the second tool, a third-party server embodying a second third-party terminal, and generates a public and private key combination for the respective transaction objects, and a further one-time password (OTP) sent to the user's telephone number, or alternately TOTP or device token. The public key is used to generate a secure URI, where the first tool, a first third-party terminal, redirects to, and validates the transaction with OTP. A final confirmation is then transmitted to the second third-party terminal.

(54) INTERACTIVE ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE TOOLS FOR REAL ESTATE ENTITY TRANSACTIONS AND OTHER USE CASES

(51) G 06Q 20/00

Interactive artificial intelligence tools. for real estate entity transactions and other use cases are disclosed. The tools include portable computing devices, messaging tools utilizing telephony-based or related identification numbers, servers, networks, real estate entities, transaction effectors: banks or transaction service providers, and an artificial intelligence tool embodying a natural language understanding unit (NLU), (such as deep neural network or representational learning). The knowledge base applied to the NLU produces better than 92% confidence on intent inference, proving a reliable tool to interpret and act on real estate entity transactions. Such intents include: channeling payments through payment service providers, generating receipts, payment details, arrears, and issuing vacation notices, among others

(54) MOBILE PHONE DROP PROTECTION AND ANTI-THEFT DEVICE

(57) The invention is a device for protecting mobile phone handsets when dropped and also acts as an anti-theft accessory. It consists of a retractable badge reel with a clip, a detachable lanyard clip, a high tensile string and a flat object with bonding adhesive on one side of its surfaces. It functions by clipping the retractable badge reel onto the mobile phone user, but not limited to, the belt, clothing waistline, pocket, bag or bag strap and connecting it to the flat object by using the detachable lanyard clip and high tensile string. The bonding adhesive on the flat object is then appended onto the outer side of the case or protective cover of the mobile phone handset. The retractable badge reel has an in-built recoiling high tensile string which decelerates the mobile handsets drop whilst holding and suspending it when it falls or is attempted to be stolen.

(57) The present invention relates to an automatic alarm and trap lock comprising of a remote, an alarming control system, pulley trap, rods, yarn, wire, power supply, cages and fuse to ensure tight security. In the present invention the automatic alarm and trap lock has an alarm which is directly connected with the trap whenever an intruder tries to enter or to access the entrance the alarm will start alarming as the trap goes upward. If the trap will capture the intruder the alarm will remain alarming until the owner's come this detection of an intruder is achieved by using a plate trap (sensor) which will automatically raise an alarm in case of an intruder forceful entry. It can be heard from 300-500 meters depending on the barriers, e.g. on top of a roof it can go up 600 meters.

(57) The devices, network and artificial intelligence models for remotely allocating and generating predictive transaction terminal graphical resources are disclosed. In the first embodiment illustrated by Fig. 1 a network architecture is demonstrated, wherein two client terminals 1 and 2, connect to a remote server 3, which acts as the allocator and modeller of the graphical resources on the client terminals. In the context of the current invention, the two client terminals are configured by the same program instructions with a graphical user interface. The allocation and modelling of the graphical resources on both terminals is determined by artificial intelligence models generated for each based on a metric of factors including but not limited to preferences, historical models, time, date, location, financial ability or even weather and other factors.
